Special Olympics North Carolina would like to thank Jim Early, and all who have made this project possible, for sharing our vision to improve the lives of persons with mental retardation or closely related developmental disabilities. Proceeds generated through the sale of this book will enable Special Olympics North Carolina to continue providing year-round sports training and competition opportunities that benefit the athletes beyond sports and physical fitness. Special Olympics athletes gain confidence and self-esteem through competition, participation on teams and the opportunity to showcase their abilities. Often translating these experiences to employment, continuing education and volunteerism, Special Olympics athletes continue to shatter stereotypes and break down barriers for people with mental retardation. They inspire greatness!
